Thousands of years ago, Australia's Aborigines learned to prize the native Melaleuca tree. They found that by pressing its leaves, an oil with a remarkable ability to heal, soothe and disinfect was obtained.

The therapeutic properties of Tea Tree Oil were first documented in the 1920s. After the Second World War however, with the development of antibiotics and synthetic antiseptics, natural substances like Tea Tree Oil were 'old fashioned' and natural oils such as tea tree all but disappeared from medicine cabinets and first aid kits.

But in recent times, there has been a worldwide swing back to traditional treatments as people increasingly demand nature's remedies in preference to petro-chemical based synthetic derivatives and other manufactured preparations. The health benefits of the Australian tea tree are rapidly gaining recognition around the world with the demand for this oil growing year by year. From the days of the 'bush-cutters' with very little annual oil production, larger commercial organisations and farming methods have been developed in Australia in order to meet the growing demand for the oil which is expected to grow.

Tea Tree Manor is proud to be part of the growing natural health and products renaissance and continues to develop its range of Tea Tree Oil based products for personal, household, pet care and commercial use. All Tea Tree Manor products are made to exacting standards of purity and quality and of course animal testing methods are not employed at any stage of the development or production of our products.

The tea tree oil content for each product varies depending on its purpose and is then blended with the appropriate essential oils and extracts to maximise each product's effectiveness.
